

Anti-Money Laundering and Compliance Procedures

The following policy of KEY TO MARKETS NZ LIMITED (the “Company”) has been derived from the general principles, laws, regulations and directives for combating money laundering. The Company is taking security measures and has adopted policies, practices and procedures that promote high ethical and professional standards and prevent the Company from being used, intentionally or unintentionally, by criminal elements.

The Company has put in place Know Your Customer (KYC) programmes as an essential element for service, risk management and control procedures. Such programmes include:

- customer acceptance policy,
- customer identification,
- on-going monitoring of high risk accounts,
- risk management,
- categorization of clients on a risk basis.

The Company is obliged not only to establish the identity of its customers, but also to monitor account activity to determine those transactions that do not conform with the normal or expected transactions for that customer or type of account. KYC constitutes a core feature of services’ risk management and control procedures. The intensity of KYC programs beyond these essential elements is tailored to the degree of risk.

1. Customer Acceptance Policy

The Company maintains clear customer acceptance policies and procedures, including a description of the types of customer that are likely to pose a higher than average risk. Before accepting a potential client, KYC and due diligence procedures are followed, by examining factors such as customers’ background, country of origin, public or high profile position, linked accounts, business activities or other risk indicators.

Extensive due diligence is essential for an individual with high net worth but whose source of funds is unclear. New clients’ money is transferred through a reputable bank. Banks have their own anti-money laundering procedures. A decision to enter into business relationships with higher risk customers, such as politically exposed persons, is taken exclusively at senior management level.

2. Customer Identification

Customer identification is an essential element of KYC standards. For the purposes of this paper, a customer includes:

- the person or entity that maintains an account with the company or those on whose behalf an account is maintained (i.e. beneficial owners);
- the beneficiaries of transactions conducted by professional intermediaries;
- any person or entity connected with a financial transaction who can pose a significant reputational or other risk to the company.

The Company maintains a systematic procedure for identifying new customers and cannot enter into a service relationship until the identity of a new customer is satisfactorily verified.

Procedures document and enforce policies for identification of customers and those acting on their behalf. The best documents for verifying the identity of customers are those most difficult to obtain illicitly and to counterfeit. The Company pays special attention in the case of non-resident customers and in no case are short-circuit identity procedures followed just because the new customer is unable to present enough documents and information to satisfy the KYC and due diligence procedures.

The customer identification process applies naturally at the outset of the relationship. To ensure that records remain up-to-date and relevant, the Company undertakes regular reviews of existing records. An appropriate time to do so is when a transaction of significance takes place, when customer documentation standards change substantially, or when there is a material change in the way that the account is operated. However, if the AML/CFT (anti-money laundering and countering the financing of terrorism) Supervisor for the Company (AML/CFT Supervisor) becomes aware at any time, through compliance and/or AML/CFT Supervisor reviews, that it lacks sufficient information about an existing customer, immediate steps are taken to ensure that all relevant information is obtained as quickly as possible.

The Company will not accept as customers, persons or entities from restricted or sanctioned countries, organisations. Reference points for such reviews include the websites of:

- Australian Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade,
- United Nations Consolidated Lists,
- New Zealand Police TSA Lists,
- US Office of Foreign Assets Control.

The Company can be exposed to reputational risk, and should therefore apply enhanced due diligence to such operations. Private accounts, which by nature involve a large measure of confidentiality, can be opened in the name of an individual, a commercial business, a trust, an intermediary or a personalized investment company. In each case reputational risk may arise if the company does not diligently follow established KYC procedures. All new clients and new accounts are approved by at least one person the Companies Customer Financial Officer or its own AML/CFT Officer. In case of a new high risk customer, the final decision is taken by the Companies managing director. Particular safeguards have been put in place internally to protect confidentiality of customers and their business. The Company ensures that equivalent scrutiny and monitoring of these customers and their business is conducted, e.g. it is available to be reviewed by the AML/CFT Supervisor and auditors.

The Company maintains clear standards and policies, on what records must be kept for customer identification and individual transactions. Such practice is essential to permit the Company to monitor its relationship with the customer, to understand the customer's on-going business and, if necessary, to provide evidence in the event of disputes, legal action, or a financial investigation that could lead to criminal prosecution.

As the starting point and follow-up of the identification process, the Company obtains customer identification papers and retain copies of them for at least five years after an account is closed. The Company also retains all financial transaction records for at least five years from the date when the Company's relationship with the client was terminated or a transaction was completed.

General identification requirements

The Company obtains all information necessary to establish to its full satisfaction the identity of each new customer and the purpose and intended nature of the business relationship. The extent and nature of the information depends on the type of applicant (personal, corporate, etc.) and the expected size of the account.

When an account has been opened, but problems of verification arise in the service relationship which cannot be resolved, the Company can close the account and return the money to the source from which it was received. While the transfer of an opening balance from an account in the customer's name in another organization subject to the same KYC standard will be considered, the Company follow its own KYC procedures. The Company can consider the possibility that the previous account manager may have asked for the account to be removed because of a concern about dubious activities.

Naturally, customers have the right to move their business from one organization to another. However, if the Company has any reason to believe that an applicant is being refused service facilities by another organization, the Company is duty-bound to engage in enhanced due diligence procedures to the customer.

The Company will not agree to open an account or conduct on-going business with a customer who insists on anonymity or who gives a fictitious name. Nor should confidential numbered accounts function as anonymous accounts but they should be subject to exactly the same KYC procedures as all other customer accounts, even if the test is carried out by selected staff. Whereas a numbered account can offer additional protection for the identity of the account-holder, the identity must be known to a sufficient number of staff to operate proper due diligence.

Specific Customer Due Diligence and Identity Procedures (attached)

Client identification must be carried out as soon as reasonably practicable after first contact is made. As part of its obligation to exercise due diligence in customer identification, the Company must confirm that the identity information which it holds for its customers remains fully updated with all necessary identification and information throughout the business relationship. The Company reviews and monitors on a regular basis the validity and adequacy of customer identification information in its possession.

Notwithstanding the above and taking into account the degree of risk, if it becomes apparent at any time during the business relationship that the Company lacks sufficient or reliable evidence (data) and information on the identity and financial profile of an existing customer, the Company will immediately takes all necessary actions using the identification procedures and measures to provide due diligence, in order to collect the missing data and information as quickly as possible and in order to determine the identity and create a comprehensive financial profile of the customer.

Furthermore the Company monitors the adequacy of the information held and identity and economic portrait of its customers when and where one of the following events occurrences:

- conduct of a significant transaction that appears to be unusual and/or significant as against the usual type of trade and economic profile of the customer;
- a significant change in the situation and legal status of the customer such as:
  - change of directors/secretary,
  - change of registered shareholders and/or actual beneficiaries,
  - change of registered office,
  - change of trustees,
  - change of corporate name and/or trade name,
  - change of main trading partners and/or significant new business;
- a significant change in the operating rules of the customer's account, such as:
  - Change of persons authorized to handle its account,
  - Request for opening a new account in order to provide new investment services and/or financial instruments.

In case of customer transaction via internet, phone, fax or other electronic means where the customer is not present to verify the authenticity of his/her signature, or that is the person who actually owns the account, or is authorized to handle the account, the Company has established reliable methods, procedures and practices to control access to electronic means to ensure that deals with the actual owner or authorized signatory of the account.

Where the customer refuses or fails to provide the Company with the required documents and information for identification and creation of a financial portrait, before entering into the business relationship, or during the execution of an individual transaction without adequate justification, the Company will not proceed in a contractual relationship or will not execute the transaction and may also report it to the AML/CFT Supervisor. This can lead to a suspicion that the customer is engaged in money laundering and terrorist financing.

If during the business relationship the customer refuses or fails to submit all required documents and information, within reasonable time, the Company has the right to terminate the business relationship and close the accounts of the customer. The compliance department also examines whether to report the case to the AML/CFT Supervisor.

Personal Customers details required

Accounts for Individuals:

1. True full name and/or names used.
2. Current permanent address, including postal code.
3. Date of birth.
4. Profession or occupation.

Names should be verified by reference obtained from a reputable source which bears a photograph, such as:

- current valid full passport,
- government issued photo identification card.

In addition to the customer's name verification, the current permanent address should be verified by obtaining any one of the following documents in original form:

- copy of a recent utility bill,
- local tax authority bill,
- bank statement,
- checking a telephone directory,
- credit card monthly statement.

In addition to the above, an introduction from a respected customer personally known to the Manager of the Company or from a trusted member of staff can assist the verification procedure. Details of the introduction should be recorded on the customer's file.

In addition:

- where customer contact is face-to-face;
- where address verification may be difficult, government issued photo identification must be obtained;
- if in doubt seek to verify identity with a reputable credit or financial institution in the customers country of residence.

Where customer contact is not face-to-face;

- verification of identity and current address should be sought from a reputable credit or financial institution in the applicant's country of residence.

Accounts for Corporate Customers:

- company searches, and other commercial enquiries to ensure that the applicant has not been or in the process of being dissolved, struck off, wound up or terminated;
- if changes to company structure occur or ownership occurs subsequent to opening of an account with the company, further checks should be made;
- Identity verification should aim to identify:
  - the company,
  - the directors,
  - all persons duly authorized to operate the account,
  - in case of private companies, the major beneficial shareholders,
  - the company's business profile in terms of nature and scale of activities.

The following documents are required:

- the original or certified copy of the Certificate of incorporation,
- constitution,
- resolution of the Board of Directors to enter into transactions on the Forex/CFDs markets and conferring authority to those who will act for the customer,

- where appropriate a search of the file at the Companies' Registry,
- identity of individuals who are connected with the company.

Creation of financial portrait

- The Company must be satisfied that it is dealing with a real person, and for this purpose, obtains sufficient identification documents to prove that the applicant is who he/she claims to be.
- The Company must verify the identity of beneficial owners of accounts. For legal persons, the Company requires such data and information to understand the ownership and control structure of the customer. Regardless of the customer's type (e.g. natural or legal person, partnership or sole trader), the Company take adequate data and information on the customer's business activities and the expected pattern and level of transactions.
- The identity of all customers is verified on the basis of reliable data and information given or received from independent and reliable sources, i.e. those data and information that is difficult to be falsified or to be obtained in an illegal way.
- The home and work addresses are considered a key element of the identity of a person.

All data and information must be collected before entering into business relationship with the customer. In order to create a financial portrait of the customer and, as a minimum, the Company must establish the following from the information provided by the customer:

- the purpose and justification (reason) for the conclusion of the business relationship;
- the anticipated turnover of the customer's account, the nature of transactions, the expected source of money to be credited to the account and the expected destination of outgoing payments;
- the size of assets and annual income, a clear description of the major business / professional activities / work.

The data and information that assist in establishing a financial portrait of the client (legal entity) include:

- company name,
- country of incorporation,
- headquarters address,
- names and identity of beneficial owners,
- directors / authorized signatories,
- financial data,
- information of the group and/or companies that may be associated with the customer (country of incorporation of holding company, subsidiaries and associated companies, the principal activities, financial results).

All above data and information will be recorded on a separate form which is filed in the customer's file along with all other documents, and internal memos from the minutes of the meetings with the client. This form is updated on a regular basis or whenever new information on any changes or additions occur which affect the financial profile of the customer.

Simplified Customer due diligence and identification procedures

The Company may apply simplified customer due diligence and identification procedures, provided that the Company has sufficient information to establish that the client qualifies for the simplified customer due diligence.

A simplified procedure is applied to the following customers:

- a company that is listed on an exchange registered under Part 2B of the Securities Markets Act 1988;
- a government department named in schedule 1 of the State Sector Act 1988;
- a local authority as defined in section 5 of the Local Government Act 2002;
- the New Zealand Police;
- the New Zealand Security Intelligence Service;
- any other entity or class of entities specified by regulations of New Zealand;
- credit or financial institution covered by the EU Directive;
- credit or financial institution carrying out one or more of the financial business activities as defined in law and which is situated in a country outside the European Economic Area, which:
  - in accordance with a decision of the Advisory Authority for Combating Money Laundering and Terrorist Financing, imposes requirements equivalent to those laid down by the EU Directive and
  - it is under supervision for compliance with those requirements;
- listed companies whose securities are admitted to trading on a regulated market in a country of the European Economic Area or in a third country which is subject to disclosure requirements consistent with community legislation;
- domestic public authorities of member states of the European Economic Area that meet the following requirements:
  - they were delegated a public office according to the treaty of the European Union, the treaties for the Communities or European Union Law,
  - the identity is publicly available, transparent and certain,
  - the customers activities, as well as its accounting practices are transparent,
  - they are subject to a community institutional organ or the authorities of a member state, or they are subject to adequate procedures ensuring the control of their activities;
- the Company may also conduct simplified customer due diligence on a person who purports to act on behalf of a customer when the Company already has a business relationship with the customer at the time the person acts on behalf of the customer.

Enhanced due diligence measures

The Company applies increased due diligence measures and customer identification procedures in the following cases:

- if the company establishes a business relationship with a customer that is:
  - a trust or another vehicle for holding personal assets,
  - a non-resident customer from a country that has insufficient anti-money laundering and countering financing of terrorism systems or measures in place,
  - a company with nominee shareholders or shares in bearer form;

- if a customer seeks to conduct an occasional transaction through the company and that customer is:
  - a trust or another vehicle for holding personal assets,
  - a non-resident customer from a country that has insufficient anti-money laundering and countering financing of terrorism systems or measures in place,
  - a company with nominee shareholders or shares in bearer form;

- if a customer seeks to conduct, through the company, a complex, unusually large transaction or unusual pattern of transactions that has or have no apparent or visible economic or lawful purpose;

- when the Company considers that the level of risk involved is such that enhanced due diligence should apply to a particular situation;

- any other circumstances specified in regulations;

- where the customer has not been physically present for identification purposes;

- in respect of cross-frontier correspondent banking relationships with credit institutions-customers from third countries;

- in respect of transactions or business relationships with politically exposed persons residing in a country within the European Economic Area or a third country.

The Company must conduct enhanced customer due diligence in accordance with section 26 of the Anti-Money Laundering and Countering Financing of Terrorism Act 2009 (“the Act”) if:

- it establishes a business relationship with a customer who it has determined is a politically exposed person; or

- a customer who it has determined is a politically exposed person seeks to conduct an occasional transaction through the reporting entity.

The Company must conduct enhanced customer due diligence in accordance with sections 27 and 28 of the Act if it is an ordering institution, an intermediary institution, or a beneficiary institution in relation to a wire transfer.

The Company must conduct enhanced customer due diligence in accordance with section 29 of the Act if it has, or proposes to have, a correspondent banking relationship.

The Company must conduct enhanced due diligence in accordance with section 30 of the Act if:

- it establishes a business relationship with a customer that involves new or developing technologies, or new or developing products, that might favour anonymity; or

- a customer seeks to conduct an occasional transaction through the reporting entity that involves new or developing technologies, or new or developing products, that might favour anonymity.

Enhanced customer due diligence measures is taken in all other instances which due to their nature entail a higher risk of money laundering or terrorist financing.

Performance by third parties

The Company may rely on third parties for applying the requirements in respect of customer's identification procedures and customer due diligence measures provided that all data and information is held by the third person for customer identification and certified copies of the originals are provided to the Company.

On-going monitoring and recording of accounts and transactions

On-going monitoring is an essential aspect of effective KYC procedures. The Company can only effectively control and reduce the risk if it has an understanding of normal and reasonable account activity of its customers so that it has means of identifying transactions which fall outside the regular pattern of an account's activity. Without such knowledge, it is likely to fail in its duty to report suspicious transactions to the appropriate authorities in cases where they are required to do so. The extent of the monitoring needs to be risk-sensitive.

For all accounts, the Company has systems in place to detect unusual or suspicious patterns of activity. This can be done by establishing limits for a particular class or category of accounts. Particular attention is paid to transactions that exceed these limits.

Certain types of transactions alert to the possibility that the customer is conducting unusual or suspicious activities. They may include transactions that do not appear to make economic or commercial sense (big transactions), or that involve large amounts of cash deposits that are not consistent with the normal and expected transactions of the customer.

Intensified monitoring for higher risk accounts is conducted. The Company has set key indicators for such accounts, taking note of the background of the customer, such as the country of origin and source of funds, the type of transactions involved, and other risk factors.

Record Keeping

The Company is required to keep records for a period of at least 7 years by law. The 7 year period is calculated following the carrying out of the transactions or the end of the business relationship.

The following records must be kept:

- copies of the evidential material of the customer identity,
- relevant evidential material and details of all business relations and transactions, including documents for recording transactions in the accounting books and
- relevant documents of correspondence with the customers and other persons with whom they keep a business relation.

All documents and information are available rapidly and without delay to the authorities for the purpose of discharging the duties imposed on them by the law. The AML/CFT Supervisor needs to be able to compile a satisfactory audit trail. Document retention may be in original documents or certified true copies and be kept in hard copy, or other format such as electronic form given that they can be available at any time and without delay.

When setting up document retention policies, the Company considers the statutory requirements and the potential needs of the unit. Documents and information must be original or true copies. In cases where the documents are being certified by another person and not the Company, or the third party, then the documents must be notarized.

Risk management

Effective KYC procedures embrace routines for proper management oversight, systems and controls, segregation of duties, training and other related policies. The board of directors of the Company is fully committed to an effective KYC programme and procedures that ensures their effectiveness. Explicit responsibility is allocated within the organization for ensuring that the Company's policies and procedures are managed effectively and are in accordance with local supervisory practice. The channels for reporting suspicious transactions are clearly specified and communicated to all personnel.

The Company maintains an on-going employee training program so that the staff are adequately trained in KYC procedures. The timing and content of training for various staff categories is adapted by the Company for its own needs. Training requirements should have a different focus for new staff, front-line staff, compliance staff or staff dealing with new customers. New staff are educated in the importance of KYC policies and the basic requirements at the Company. Staff members who deal directly with the customers are trained to verify the identity of new customers, to exercise due diligence in handling accounts of existing customers on an on-going basis and to detect patterns of suspicious activity. Regular refresher training is provided to ensure that employees are reminded of their responsibilities and are kept informed of new developments. It is crucial that all relevant staff fully understand the need for and implement KYC policies consistently. A culture within services that promotes such understanding is the key to a successful implementation.
